The Ernest J. Gaines Award for Literary Excellence honors the legacy of one of America's finest literary treasures and recognizes the work of a deserving fiction writer.

The winner will receive a $10,000 award and present a reading from the work at the award ceremony in January 2011. Travel, accommodations, and meals will be provided.

Criteria for submission: Criteria for submission: Any book-length work of fiction published in the U.S. during 2009. The writer must be African-American. Submissions will be accepted from February 1, 2010 through April 30, 2010 (postmarked).

The Gaines award accepts self-published books for judging under some circumstances. Self-published books must have substantial sales, be reviewed in well-known journals, or must be the choice of a major book club. Proof of sales, inclusion in book clubs, or published reviews must be submitted along with copies of the book. Without such documentation, self-published books will not be reviewed.

To enter a book for review, send completed registration form and 10 copies of the book to:
